The first thing Margaret Wong did as guest speaker at Lincoln-West's 2013 High School graduation at Severance Hall was to place herself in profile between the graduates and the audience. As she did so, she explained that she did not want to turn her back to the graduates. That is when we knew we were in the presence of an extraordinary woman. Those who are familiar with Ms. Wong know her record of breaches of protocol as families and even teachers cheered for their students by name. The teachers and the administrators were privy to many human interest stories the audience did not know. For example, senior Kendra Coyne, a cancer survivor, almost didn't make it to graduation. Struggles with health, finances, and family almost made her drop out of high school. With the help of teachers and administrators, Kendra an immigration attorney; founder of Margaret Wong and Associates; named a "Leading Lawyer" and "Super Lawyer" by her peers; and named the Honor Professor of People University of China, which has the number one law school in China. Ms. Wong's professional successes grew from her personal chalexcellence: 35 five years of practice as lenges as an immigrant to America. Her work ethic, entrepreneurial spirit, and resourceful nature combine with her great compassion for people in need-especially immigrants to America. In fact, Ms. Wong has written a highly praised book on immigration entitled The Immigrant's Way. Ms.

Wong works tirelessly to help turn Newcomers into Americans. That dedication to diversity is why Ms. Wong spoke at Lincoln-West's High School graduation. Students attending Lincoln-West's International Studies Academy comprise more than 41 nationalities and speak more than 25 different languages. It is the most diverse academy in the Cleveland Metropolitan School District, perhaps even in the state of Ohio. The academy, led by Dr. Irene Javier, offers a rich bilingual, multicultural, language acquisition and development program. Lincoln-West celebrates its international heritage every fall with a parade of flags, ethnic food, music, and dancing. For this reason, Lincoln-West is often referred to as a Little United Nations.

Both students and teachers felt the strain of leave-taking. Kleenex was passed out as families and instructors entered the auditorium. The solemn air of graduation was threaded with 黃唯大律師的忠告充滿了智慧的結晶:將 每分錢存起來,記住如果你一小時掙六美元,不 要花六美元買一杯咖啡;不要吃的太多;當你的 老闆訓斥你的時候, 記住有一天你也要成爲老 闆,不要與老闆對吵;學會從錯誤中吸取教訓; 不要做會讓你羞于告訴媽媽的事;知道你的價 值;每天寫日記;勤讀,勤寫,勤説;每天看報紙;每 個月讀一本書;充實你的大腦;每天早起工作; 不要喝醉,不要做愚蠢的事。男朋友和女朋友 總會有的;但是你生命中最重要的東西是:你的 大腦, 你的心和你的勇氣及膽量。當你做的事 是正確的,你的膽量會告訴你。

Valedictorian Hung Le told of his father's imprisonment in South Viet Nam and his family's subsequent immigration to the U.S. from a refugee camp in 2008. Two years ago, Le's oldest sister graduated from Lincoln-West with honors. As Le watched her on stage that night, he vowed to be valedictorian someday. That someday was here. Le remembered coming to high school with very little mastery of English; he thanked his science teacher Angela Bruehler for meeting him where he was and taking him all the way to graduation. Shasheen Reed's mother avidly watched the deaf interpreter to hear every word as her son walked the stage to receive his diploma. There were students in wheel chairs, students in walkers, and students who needed a helping hand to grasp that diploma, but they were there. And,
