factors of having dropped out of high school and suffering from dyslexia makes it all the more remarkable. I wondered whether some polls might classify him as a businessman whereas others might merely try to characterize him as a high school drop out supporting Trump. This businessman's location also adds to the story, as it is in the well known liberal city of Cleveland Heights, itself located in the mostly Democrat county of Cuyahoga. Not a party line voter, this businessman recounted the struggles his business has faced in the recent years and the fact that he would only speak to me on the condition of anonymity

While surely journalists have always cited anonymous sources, if this happens too frequently, the public might wonder whether the stories are true or taken out of context. This in part may account for the reason that the Trump vote had been under reported. I began to wonder how many journalists refrained from reporting due to anonymity requests and how many perhaps did not actively listen to Trump supporters and their many, genuine and rea-
