

Dear Clevelanders,

As of February 22, the City of Cleveland has administered 16,955 doses of the COVID-19 vaccine. As a reminder, our COVID-19 vaccine call center is available to answer general questions pertaining to the City's vaccine distribution efforts and assist eligible individuals in scheduling an appointment to receive the vaccine.

To contact the call center, dial (216) 664-2222. The call center's hours of operation are Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Please note that only individuals who meet the Ohio Department of Health's criteria are eligible to receive the vaccine at this time. Due to limited supply, it will take time for eligible individuals to receive the vaccine. We ask for your patience. As we receive additional supply, we will be opening up additional vaccination sites and scheduling appointments for eligible individuals to receive the vaccine.

Here is a snapshot of the announcements made this week:

Feb. 23: In an effort to maintain its commitment to keeping the city clean, reducing waste, and providing quality service for our residents, the City of Cleveland released a Waste Collection and

COVID-19 Updates from Cleveland City Hall Coronavirus Prevention & Response: Week in Review

Recycling Report. With consultant, GT Environmental, the City of Cleveland conducted a study to evaluate the solid waste, recycling, and bulk collection programs operated by the Division of Waste Collection and Disposal. The main focus of the study was to understand the City's current operations and develop specific recommendations to improve efficiency, support waste reduction goals and maintain high levels of service. Click here to view the full report.

Feb. 24: The City of Cleveland introduced legislation authorizing a joint economic development agreement with the City of Warrensville Heights that will share in the income taxes created by Tremco's expansion in both cities. Tremco is a construction products manufacturer that has been operating in Cleveland for decades. The City is pleased to support the expansion of a longstanding Cleveland business and looks forward to the continued partnership with Tremco and Warrensville Heights.

Feb. 24: I signed an order extending the City's Proclamation of Civil Emergency through March 31, 2021. Click here to view the order. Essential services such as Police, Fire, EMS, waste collection and Utilities will remain operational.

Join the City of Cleveland and the Urban Land Institute Cleveland's (ULI) inclusive symposium, "Building the 21st Century City: The Future is now!" on March 2-3, 2021. The symposium will focus on the critical components of the development of cities in the 21st Century and will utilize key actions to identify concrete steps to energize the City of Cleveland and stakeholders to accelerate competitive action steps. To learn more about the symposium, click here. To register for this event, click here.

I want to congratulate the Greater Cleveland Partnership (GCP) board on their selection of Mr. Baiju Shah as the next president and chief executive officer of GCP. Mr. Shah is the right person at the right time to lead GCP into the future. He understands business, the need to have an equitable economy, and that these ideas are necessary to have sustainable economic growth. Mr. Shah has good relationships and a demeanor that shows he is willing to work with people to get things done. Mr. Shah is a good choice and I look forward to working with him.

As of February 25, there are 324 COVID-19 City resident fatalities and 25,040 cases of coronavirus in the City of Cleveland. I urge all residents to social distance, wash your hands, stay at home whenever possible and wear a mask. Please remember to encourage your friends and family to do their part to protect our most vulnerable residents. Together, we can slow the spread of COVID-19 in 2021.

Thank you and stay safe,
Frank G. Jackson, Mayor
City of Cleveland

Short of War

By Kevin Rudd March/April 2021

How to Keep U.S.-Chinese Confrontation From Ending in Calamity

Officials in Washington and Beijing don't agree on much these days, but there is one thing on which they see eye to eye: the contest between their two countries will enter a decisive phase in the 2020s. This will be the decade of living dangerously. No matter what strategies the two sides pursue or what events unfold, the tension between the United States and China will grow, and competition will intensify; it is inevitable. War, however, is not. It remains possible for the two countries to put in place guardrails that would prevent a catastrophe: a joint framework for what I call "managed strategic competition" would reduce the risk of competition escalating into open conflict.

The Chinese Communist Party is increasingly confident that by the decade's end, China's economy will finally surpass that of the United States as the world's largest in terms of GDP at market exchange rates. Western elites may dismiss the significance of that milestone; the CCP's Politburo does not. For China, size always matters. Taking the number one slot will turbocharge Beijing's confidence, assertiveness, and leverage in its dealings with Washington, and it will make China's central bank more likely to float the yuan, open its capital account, and challenge the U.S. dollar as the main global reserve currency. Meanwhile, China continues to advance on other fronts, as well. A new policy plan, announced last fall, aims to allow China to dominate in all new technology domains, including artificial intelligence, by 2035. And Beijing now intends to complete its military modernization program by 2027 (seven years ahead of the previous schedule), with the main goal of giving China a decisive edge in all conceivable scenarios for a conflict with the United States over Taiwan. A victory in such a conflict would allow President Xi Jinping to carry out a forced reunification with Taiwan before leaving power—an achievement that would put him on the same level within the CCP pantheon as Mao Zedong.

Washington must decide how to respond to Beijing's assertive agenda—and quickly. If it were to opt for economic decoupling and open confrontation, every country in the world would be forced to take sides, and the risk of escalation would only grow. Among policymakers and experts, there is understandable skepticism as to whether Washington and Beijing can avoid such an outcome. Many doubt that U.S. and Chinese leaders can find their way to a framework to manage their diplomatic relations, military operations, and activities in cyberspace within agreed parameters that would maximize stability, avoid accidental escalation, and make room for both competitive and collaborative forces in the relationship. The two countries need to consider something akin to the procedures and mechanisms that the United States and the Soviet Union put in place to govern their relations after the Cuban missile crisis—but in this case, without first going through the near-death experience of a barely avoided war.

Stay informed.

In-depth analysis delivered weekly. Managed strategic competition would involve establishing certain hard limits on each country's security policies and conduct but would allow for full and open competition in the diplomatic, economic, and ideological realms. It would also make it possible for Washington and Beijing to cooperate in certain areas, through bilateral arrangements and also multilateral forums. Although such a framework would be difficult to construct, doing so is still possible—and the alternatives are likely to be catastrophic.
